

WindoWall

The artist's idea is to activate our imagination of space and place beyond the limitations of bricks and mortar and to promote the idea of depth and layers of existence. The artist has installed a series of 12 x 8ft photographs located at 6 sites in Letterkenny for a period of six months. The photographs are mounted onto the gable of various buildings and each photograph is a life-size representation of what lies on the interior side of that wall. The walls in effect are turned inside out, exchanging outside wall for inside wall, public for private. There are a number of ways a viewer may consider the work, but hopefully the photographs are understood fundamentally to be historical monuments - a tribute - to real lives and everyday living, using a scale that is normally reserved for billboards bombarding us with advertising.
